FOREWORD

The Junior High School Movement is built on the theory of learning by doing. Pupils are given an opportunity for self-directed activity with opportunity for independent thinking.

The well-organized Junior High School must provide laboratories where the adolescent may try out his instinctive desire to explore his own abilities and find out about things. There must be the lure of the gymnasium, the auditorium, and the various types of shops. These are all important, but outranking all of these is the book laboratory.

No other activity of the schools wields so vital an influence as does the school library. No other agency surpasses the library in its potential power to guide early adolescent expansion.

The selection of books for the Junior High School requires especial care. The titles in this bulletin have been selected by Miss Adeline B. Zachert, Director of School Libraries, to meet the requirements of the courses of study in supplying informational material and to furnish vicarious experiences through books in broadening the adolescent vision of life and its rich opportunities. For these twofold purposes of the book laboratory, both reference and general reading books must be available. An effort has been made to select titles which are within the comprehension of pupils, and which will stimulate the habit of turning to books easily and readily for profit and pleasure.

The prices indicated are list prices which are subject to change.
